SOCIETY "ON WAGON," ASSERTS AUTHORESS

Mrs. Gertrude Atherton Adds That Englishmen Make Best Husbands.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Gertrude Atherion, the novelist, after spending the present social season in New York, has made the following discoveries:

"American men have no subtlety.
"The Englishman is the ideal man.

the American man.

"Society is on the water wagon, "The chaperon is disappearing,

"Suffrage has supplanted bridge

Society will never again have a

'Women are losing their 'cattiness. "American girls cannot be blamed for marrying foreigners in preference to American men," said Mrs. Atherton, ir her apartments at the Hotel Algonquin

"The Englishmen-in fact, all Contimental men-know better how to make love and how to retain it. American men have none of the subtlety of the well-bred Englishman-none of his finesse, his charm of conversation, of manner. If I were to marry (I shall and home unpermanent) it should be to most interesting type of the genus

"While the American man has stood still, the American woman has forged ahead at a tremendous mental speed, and has left the man far behind in interest and development.

"The influence of woman is responsible for many encouraging changes in society. There is far less drinking among men and women of society not only here but in England. Barkey water has taken the place of whiskies and wines here and in London.

"As a consequence of the individual awakening of the women of society the chaperon is fast disappearing. The modern American society girl does not reed a chaperon. She is quite capable of looking after herself and taking care of any situation. In the more fashionable circles one chaperon to a dozen girls is sufficient.

"When I was here last, the debris of bridge was everywhere. Women talked and chattered and played bridge the whole time. But now that a number of socially preminent women have taken up the suffrage cause, the rest have followed.

"But now suffrage has arrived. It is

Fancy Mrs. Mackay wasting her time 'leading society?'
"Woman has proved that she can earn her own living in congenial pursuits, and 'old maid' has no more terror for her. The day will come when marriage will be an episode; which she can take upon herself or not as she chooses, the decision depending on what her views of her responsibilities in life may be.

"But the most important change that as taken place in woman is that she losing her cattiness." Of course, she asn't lost it entirely, and never will but she improves vastly."
